Ireland's Waters: Re-imagining the future

Tullamore Court Hotel

20th March 2020

The quality of Ireland's waters is continuing to decline. To address this, wide-scale changes are required both on an individual, personal nature on the one hand and a collective, national reorientation on the other hand.

This symposium hosted by The Water Forum will mark the beginning of the discussion required to trigger and support a broadly-based public debate on our water quality, land use and the implications of inaction.

The Water Forum welcomes you to join the conversation.
